Step 1: Stone the Pants

Starting in the front, stone a stripe down the outside edge of each side of the large black portion of the pants. Place one stone per inch, from the top of the black section to the bottom seam on the pants. From under the waistband to the seam at the bottom of the pant leg, Addie's measured 31 inches and I used 32 stones.

Next, Skip the first black stripe as everyone's first stripe varies. Some dancers only have a partial on one or both sides. Move to the second black stripe. Stone this one the same as you did on the front, placing the stones in the center of the stripe. Again I used 32 stones and lined them up with the first section. You will place rhinestones on 4 black stripes on each side. Everyone should have one empty full or partial stripe in the front, and at least one empty full length stripe in the back unstoned.

For the waistband, follow the pattern below. Addie's waistband is 20 inches total and I used 24 per side, spacing is about 1 inch apart in a triangle pattern and wraps all the way around.

Step 2: Stone the Shirt

On all of the black stripes, place stones an inch apart, keeping them centered on the stripe. Do the same with the collar.

I didn't put any rhinestones on the back of the collar because it was such a small space and folds inward when worn. Addie's collar just has 3 stripes per side with stones.

Step 3: Stone the back cutout

Place one stone per 1.25 inches along the seam of the cutout on both sides. I used a total of 10.

Reach out to Emily if you end up needing more rhinestones.
